Field of the Invention The present invention generally relates to a communication apparatus, and more particularly to a communication apparatus having a function for combining information based on a received audio/video signal. 2. Description of the Related Art Recently, in addition to a function of receiving an audio/video signal and reproducing the received signal, an apparatus having a function of storing an audio/video signal and outputting it in a desired manner, e.g., a still reproduction, a playback, a recording and the like, is widely used. However, in the conventional apparatus having the above function, the received audio/video signal is stored in a memory, and the stored audio/video signal is sequentially reproduced in a desired manner. Therefore, in the case where it is necessary to record the received audio/video signal in a recording medium such as a video tape, a data file or the like, data can not be written to the recording medium until the recording medium is mounted in the apparatus. Thus, it is impossible to store the received audio/video signal in the recording medium while the received audio/video signal is being received. Furthermore, if a user desires to extract a desired scene of the received audio/video signal from the received audio/video signal, the user must separately use an additional playback function. Therefore, even in the case where a reproduced image is to be displayed on a TV receiver, the user must temporarily switch the function of the apparatus to a TV receiver to display the reproduced image.Friday, August 8, 2010 Thank goodness for Gollum.
